Indian Territory Invasion.

It is announced that a great meeting in favor of an expedition into the Indian Territory is to be held in the coming week at Kansas City. The announcement says the authority for the statement is excellent. A letter is also printed, from the postmaster at Cheyenne, Indian Territory giving an account of a meeting at Coffeyville, Kansas to gather recruits. This letter represents that the chief speaker at the latter place, was D. L. Payne, from Wichita, Kansas. He wanted a force of ten thousand strong, or sufficient to resist every opposition. He said that the last expedition was a failure from the fact that they were weak. Their purpose now was to resist every opposition; United States soldiers, Indians, etc. They have now mills, agricultural implements, seeds, live arms, etc., on the line near Warden, Kansas.

The above are fair specimens of the information which is daily reaching Washington in regard to anticipated operations in Missouri and Kansas.

Pacific R.R. & Rates.

Chicago, February 23.—Last night the passenger agents of all the east and west trunk lines and Thomas L. Kimball, representing the Union and Central Pacific agreed substantially on an arrangement by which during the 3d of the Pacific Mail and Pacific railways for passengers, the Union Pacific and Central Pacific roads shall receive seventy and the roads east of Omaha thirty per cent of the passenger fares. This is yet to be ratified by the eastern trunk line managers. But we are current that there will shortly, perhaps as early as Monday, be a heavy break in western passenger rates to the Missouri river.

It is notorious that there is a powerful lobby influence in Washington, urging the enactment of a law to open up the Indian Territory in order to advance some of Jay Gould's railroad stocks. It is true that Senator Vest in y not knew of any lobby or lobby influence, but others do, and the influence is very powerful. The stock of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway has advanced enormously, on account of the prospect that the territory will be opened up. A very large number of orders from this city have been sent to New York to purchase this stock outright, or on a margin, and somebody has made money by being on "the inside," as it is called. The mania for stock speculation is on the increase, and members of Congress take chances with the rest.

Jefferson Davis thinks that his memoirs will be ready for publication in the fall of this year. A large portion of the first volume will be devoted to his view as to the causes which led to the late war. The remainder of the volume and the whole of the second volume will relate to the conduct of the war. Both volumes will be illustrated with portraits of Confederate leaders. Mrs. Davis and General Joseph Davis, a nephew, assist in the preparation of the work. In fact, the old man has his hands full just now, expecting to raise as many as 1,000 bales of cotton on his Mississippi plantation during the coming season.

Napoleon's Sisters.

The sisters of Napoleon were too valuable as counters in his game to be allowed to give their hands where they liked. Elise, it is true, chose for herself before his period of omnipotence, and became the wife of young Bacchini, a poor Corsican officer, who lived to share with her a throne which was scarcely wide enough for two. She was made Princess of Piombino and Lucca, and Grand Duchess of Tuscany, and left a family who afterward held positions at the court of Napoleon III. The life of Pauline the second sister, if written as only herself or the recording angel might have done it, would probably have surpassed anything that the Sieur De Brantome has left for the wonder and the scandalized amusement of mankind. While she was yet little more than a child her hand was disputed by Jules Dupet, Freron and Leclerc. She chose the last and accompanied him to Santo Domingo, undeterred by pestilence and massacres, and after faithfully nursing him through smallpox, she brought him back to France for burial. She was taken in hand by her brother, who needed to strengthen his interests at home, and married to Prince Camillo Borghese, a union unhappy from the beginning of the betrothal. Perhaps she loved Leclerc, she certainly adored her brother—but the rest of the world of men, with the exception of poor Borghese, seemed to her like creatures of her conquest and her insatiable curiosity. She was one of the most beautiful women of her time. She posed to Canova for his "Venus Victrix," and the great sculptor is reported to have said that, with such models, statues could be made by journeyman. She had many virtues; she was amiable, generous, enlightened and intelligent; she loved letters and art, and, as Duchess of Guastalla, kept a brilliant and popular court. The ablest politician of the three sisters, and the best personally interesting, was Caroline, who married Murat, and who became successively Duchess of Cleves and Queen of Naples. She was splendidly educated, brave as a lioness in battle, and possessed of a singular administrative ability; but she betrayed her brother too readily when fortune frowned, and she married General McDonald too soon after her husband's tragic death.

An Oration.

The White Star steamship Celtic which arrived from Liverpool on Wednesday last, brought a strange passenger, who boarded the vessel in mid-ocean. A large white owl dropped on one of the forward spars in an exhausted condition one evening when the vessel was about 800 miles off the coast of Newfoundland. When brought to the deck by a sailor, the owl was found to be nearly dead from cold and hunger, and almost to weak to eat. It had become greatly emaciated and trembled violently in endeavoring to swallow the first morsel of meat which was placed in its beak. The owl slowly recovered, and is now perfectly well. It is a land bird, and is supposed to have been blown off the coast of Newfoundland by the westerly gales which had for some days previous prevailed there. Finding itself once out at sea it had probably ceased making efforts to reach the land, and had drifted before the gales its only efforts being to keep above the water. The bird must have possessed remarkable powers of endurance, the officers say, to have kept up so long. The Celtic's owl, which is now quite tame, measures nearly five feet wing to wing, and is white with the exception of a few specks of dark color. It will probably live for some time to come on board the vessel which is selected as its home, while in mid-ocean. Land birds have rarely been seen so far out at sea.—New York Times.

The cost of burying members of Congress who died during the past year, at Washington, amounted to $13,335.97, and the printing of their eulogies cost the government $3,000 more. There was some sense in the provision which John Randolph, of Roanoke, inserted in his will, that he should die at Washington, during a session of Congress, he wished to be buried "at his own expense, like a gentleman, and not at that of the government, like a pauper!"

The Telegraph War.

No new facts of importance have been developed during the day in the telegraph war. From the morning stock reports it will be seen the seizure has had no appreciable effect on Western Union stock. No new legal move has been made, but both sides are preparing for a desperate struggle in the case. It is said that Senator Henry M. Teller is to represent the Jay Gould party in the contest; and is not improbable that the matter will be transferred to the U. S. court on the return of Judge Haller. The Western Union wires east of Dodge are working badly, having been prostrated by the severe storm that has swept the plains. The Gould lines have opened an office at the corner of 16th and Larimer, with B. F. Bush as manager. The Western Union is using the Edison telephone wire to Georgetown. In the mean time commercial business is accumulating, and press reports are uncertain and delayed.—Denver Times.

A Cincinnati diamond merchant says that the famous diamonds that were presented to General Sherman's eldest daughter, the wife of Lieutenant Fitch, by the Khedive of Egypt, have been divided between General Sherman's four daughters. When Congress had at last removed the import duty of $20,000 from their Lieutenant Fitch found that the yearly taxes on the jewels in St. Louis county, Mo., where his residence, would be more than his salary. General Sherman then took the jewels in hand and retained them to the Khedive, who once more sent them to America, praying that they would be divided among the daughters.

The late John Blackwood corresponded with George Eliot some time before he knew that she was a woman. He called her "Dear George," he says, and often used expressions which a man commonly uses only to a man." After he found out who "Dear George" was, he was naturally a little anxious to recall what he might have written her.
